THREE TOTS CREMATED AS SCHOOL BURNS

REV. GRIFFIN OF ST. MARK'S CATHOLIC CHURCH DIES

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Today is the day you should hear the first robin. According to our calendar, this is the first day of spring. Maybe you won't notice the difference, but it is the first day of spring anyway.

Pioneer hardships do not seem to be a thing of the past. We hear from Missoula, Mont. that ranchers along Packer creek were without water during the past winter except for ice taken from the creek which was melted over fires.

Murder is cheap. An Anthony, Kans., man is being held on a murder charge. He stated that he killed a man's wife with a club and pistol after the disgruntled husband had paid him $65.

The glider craze seems to be getting out of bounds a little. Since Charles Lindburgh has taken up the inexpensive method of flying, many amateur gliders have made their appearance. We know of several amateur machines that are under construction. Those who will risk their lives in these contraptions should be warned that flying in any manner is dangerous unless you know what it is all about. Flying is learned so easily that it is unnecessary for any foolhardy pioneers to risk their lives on something they could learn in a few hours of practical instruction.

And we have just heard of the man who preferred a radio to his wife because he got less interference from the radio.

No wthat we don't hear so many high-sounding, optimistic statements on how good business is, we have just about made up our mind that things must be getting back to normal.

Josephus Daniels has just now suggested it, but Congress beat him to it several years ago. We are talking about recently published articles crediting Daniels with asking for a 100 year test of the prohibition law.

And if you think that you must drink bootleg, watch your step. A report from Kansas City, Mo., says that 500 persons have just been added to the victims of cheap "jackass."

Asa Keyes, reached the height of his profession and took a backward step. He is starting all over again as a clerk in San Quentin prison, probably under the direction of guards who never peeked inside a law book.

We've always said it but few would belive it. A report from the state capital states that horses are again becoming popular on farms in this state.

Although William Howard Taft, was not generally considered a wealthy man, he left an estate valued at approximately $6,367,374.

PICKS JAIL LOCK WITH FORK

Shot through the left hand in a break from the El Cerrito city jail at noon yesterday, Terrance Williams, 27, 2629 Lakeshore drive, Muskegeon, Mich., alias H. H. Hacker, was in the county jail at Martinez last night awaiting word from the east. Williams made his escape from the El Cerrito jail after opening his cell lock with a fork yesterday noon.

Williams confessed to Chief of Police R. R. Cheek yesterday that he had violated parole in Michigan. A wire was sent to police authorities in the east. If they do not wish to press charges against him he will face trial in El Cerrito on charges of jail break and car theft.

Williams was arrested by Traffic Officer Arthur Peralta early yesterday morning following an exciting chase from the El Cerrito city hall to Ninth and Page streets Berkeley.

Officers Give Chase

Peralta, who was standing near the El Cerrito city hall, saw Williams speed by. He immediately gave chase.

Williams refused to heed the officer's siren and speeded away. At Ninth and Page streets, he swerved and crashed into the curb and his car turned over.

Peralta dragged Williams from beneath the car and a fight ensued, Williams attempting to resist arrest. Traffic Officer Stanley Williams of Albany, who was attracted by the chase, drove up a few seconds later and assisted Peralta in overpowering the prisoner.

Enroute to the El Cerrito city jail, Williams opened the door of

19 YEAR HUNT FOR BROTHER OF LOCAL GIRL ENDS IN NORTH

A 19 year search for her brother ended for Mrs. Alice Holts, 19 year old Richmond bride yesterday morning when newspapermen informed her that her brother is at Mount Vernon, Wash.

Mrs. Holte was told that her brother had been found by her mother, Mrs. Emma Beshears of Portland, at the home of foster parents in the north.

The brother is Carl Setter, 21, who was given into the care of Mrs. Henning Carlson, then living in Roseburg, Ore., by Mrs. Beshears soon after her second child, now Mrs. Holte, was born.

According to the story told by Mrs. Holte, 19 years ago her family was in desperate circumstances. When she was born, her brother was adopted by Mrs. Carlson.

Later Mrs. Setter married and as the wife of Albert Beshears started the long search for her only son ,who had disappeared with his foster mother.

After her brother had been adopted, Mrs. Holte went to the home of her grandparents in Tacoma, she said yesterday. She declares that she had never seen her brother and to her he seemed a person that had lived only in a dream.

Mrs. Holte was married a few months ago in Portland and came to Richmond with her husband.

He declared that conditions that exist in Oakland and at Los Angeles could not be blamed upon the office holders, but more upon the people of the city who sit back and take no interest in their civic government.

In concluding his address he pleaded that Kiwanis clubs in California take a bigger interest in the city government and to aid in an impartial manner.

FLEAGLES IN INCOME NET

GARDEN CITY, Kan., March 20. UP—The Fleagle family, notorious in the history of bank robberies of western Kansas and Colorado stood convicted before a district court for another time here today.

A jury verdict returned after a short deliberation, found W. H. Fleagle, son of old Jake Fleagle, guilty on five counts of tax evasion, for the period from 1924 to 1928, and said he would have to pay Finney county part of the loot which has allegedly been deposited in various banks under assumed names.

The penalty was not fixed. The attorneys filed a motion for mistrial which will come up on April 4.

The state held the money had come to Walter Fleagle from his much traveled brothers and that it was stolen. Its origin was not defended by Fleagle, the only defense being a deposition made by Ralph Fleagle at the Colorado penitentiary which was read and which stated he had loaned $6000 to his brother.

"Old Jake Fleagle" faces a similar charge and will be tried during the May term of court.

Fred Fleagle another son who is held in jail here is said to be ready to plead guilty of charges of failure to pay taxes.

One of the boys, Angel reported, pulled down the trolley, throwing the car into darkness. The second and third youths entered the car and while one pressed a gun against Angel, the other stripped the coin box from him.

Immediately after the robbery the three fled. They are believed to have gone away in an automobile.

Angel was unable to describe the three, other than that they were young and were dressed in dark clothing. They were not marked.

GIRL SAVES TOT FROM MAD DOG

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—UP—Thirteen year old Laura McFarland was something of a heroine today, as she exhibited bandages over wounds received when she bravely defended her small brother, Guy, 4, from the attack of a large police dog.

The children were playing with the dog at the Los Gatos summer home of their parents when the dog suddenly seized Guy with his teeth, badly tearing his leg.

Immediately the older sister, without a thought for the danger, seized the dog and struck him with her fists until the animal was forced to relinquish his hold on the child.

A passing motorist happened on the scene and took both children to a hospital where their wounds, inflicted by the sharp teeth and claws of the dog, were dressed.

Brave throughout the entire ordeal, Laura fainted only when all the excitement was over.

80 CHILDREN STAMPEDE IN FIRE

TRYON, Okla., March 20.—UP—Three children were killed, and the lives of 80 others were endangered when fire destroyed the one story frame Pleasant Valley school building near here late today.

The fire was caused when a pupil poured kerosene into a stove from which the hot coals were believed to have been removed. The children became panic stricken when the flames burst from the stove, massing at the front and rear doors of the building.

Several were trampled in the jam by those who managed to escape from the burning building.

The dead were: Lawanda Doddrill, seven; Freddie Eaton, eight; an Granville Murray, six.

They were burned to death.

With the first burst of flames, the children, terror stricken dashed to the two doors and to the windows. They were completely out of control for several minutes until the two women teachers, Mrs. Reese Carrenter and Miss Dinita Smith, could quiet them.

Miss Smith stationed herself at the rear exit of the building. Her fellow instructor rushed to the windows throwing them open and helping smaller children through them.

The open windows, however, only added to the terror of the scene, as the draft fanned the flames until both rooms were engulfed.

Residents of Tryon and volunteer fire fighters did not arrive at the building unitl it was a smouldering mass. The building had been consumed in less than half an hour.

Older pupils said the two teachers were the heroines of the fire and had they not been able to control the frantic children, more lives would have been lost.

"The children were wonderful," Miss Smith said. "After the first few minutes they responded to our orders like little soldiers. The older ones stood at the back of the crowd and tried to keep the smaller ones from getting hurt. They then marched out."

As She Is—And As She Is Painted

ONCE upon a time there was a nice, simple, everyday American woman, who tried to do her job—

Or, rather, to do all of her jobs, for the modern world in which she lived Had imposed on her many and different tasks and duties.

They began even before she had finished her education—

In school and in college she tried to be a good student

And, at the same time, a good tennis player, the Chairman of the Committee on Dramatics, a good friend to other girls;

She was, in addition, an affectionate and helpful daughter—

Who not only loved her mother, but tried to do things for her;

Was she a social dud—she liked a number of boys

And, frankly, tried to be nice to them, when they took her to dances and football games.

At twenty-one, she quite naturally went job-hunting in the economic field—

Her father had worked hard, all his life, and she saw no particular reason

Why he should continue to wear himself out—especially as he was no longer young—

In order to keep her, a healthy and well educated girl, in the style to which she had become accustomed.

So she got a job in an office, at $25 a week,

With a chance for working up, if she developed initiative and intelligence.

Like many another keen young woman of to-day

She worked hard and also used her head.

So that in five years she was a minor executive, earning a decent salary.

But, just as in school she had managed to be both a student and a human being,

So she didn't cease to be a human being, because she had become a successful business woman—

And she found not the slightest difficulty in falling in love and getting married.

After her marriage, she continued to work downtown—

Neither her modern husband nor herself dreamed of a different arrangement—

They had a charming home and they were, in the true sense, working partners—

He didn't attempt to be the head of the house, neither did she!

When the babies came, she devoted herself to them

During their earliest and most helpless years—

But, when they were old enough to leave home daily for school,

She, too, left it once more for the paid job she had always found worth while.

The money she earned made the problem of educating the children far easier,

And her activities outside her home helped to keep her interesting to her family.

This modern American woman of course carried other more or less incidental jobs—

She was a citizen and a voter,

She did her share of committee work for her club

She was a charming week-end hostess and she took her turn as the family chauffeur.

She was, in short, an American woman of to-day, with such a woman's gift

For doing many things well, and making no fuss about it—

And, though she would have been the first to admit her mistakes, her lapses from perfection,

She really suited her husband, her family, her boss and her friends pretty well!

Yet they merely knew her best—they didn't know about her

All the things which are known to the critics of the modern woman.

Here are three analyses, within one week, of what is wrong with her:

"American women will be the undoing of America," warns William Gerhardi, visiting English novelist and lecturer.

"American women are idols to their men," he continues to warn,

"And are worshipped as such.

"This should not be.

"America is woman-ruled, and if it continues so

"The country will become decadent and the women themselves demoralized.

"Women should not be worshipped."

Then along comes a native American author, Dr. Karl Menninger, of Topeka, Kan.,

Who has written a book called "The Human Mind,"

And who, as a psychiatrist, is apparently convinced that he knows what's wrong with modern women.

He seems to think they are getting life into a jam

By encroaching on the hitherto masculine prerogative of expressing the ego.

Men must express it, he argues, in achievement and success,

"And they don't thrive well," the doctor adds, with a certain plaintiveness,

"Unless they get, for this, feminine admiration and approbation.

"But with women as competitors, how are they going to get these things?

"The lack deflates their ego, and often has disastrous results.

"Especially in cases where both man and wife are working

"And she is as successful as he is.

"Or in cases of young people who might like to marry,

"But where the girl is intent on a career.

"By nature women are unselfish.

"They have no need of expressing their ego.

"They should be content with just being women."

In short, women's natural interest and first concern should be the happiness of men.

Yet, third and last, comes the voice of a college President—we hear him complain—

Women, says Dr. John Edgar Park of Wheaton College, should quit trying to please men.

"Girls," to quote him exactly, "should be educated to a life of naturalness.

"Women should dare to be themselves

"And quit trying to please men or imitate them."

So there you are —

Modern American women are tyrants—

Or they are competitors—

Or they are strive-to-pleasers—

And, whatever they are, some man elects himself to the job of telling them to stop!

Yet doesn't most of this masculine criticism seem not only contradictory but superficial and fallacious.

When you compare it, as we have tried to do, with the many-faceted job

Which the American woman is doing to-day, and doing, on the whole, well?

The moral is: Don't believe all you hear about the American woman—

Look around and see for yourself—

And, if you are a man, ask yourself honestly if you could do any better!

Washing the Pillows

NOW is a good time to wash the pillows. Choose a bright, windy day. Fill tub with warm soap suds and put the pillow into this.

If the ticking is badly soiled use a small brush. Work the pillows up and down in the water. Rinse them in several waters. Squeeze out as much water as possible, then shake them briskly and hang out in the air, avoiding direct sunlight as this is apt to draw out the oil and give the feathers an unpleasant odor.

When perfectly dry beat lightly and shake well. Hanging them out in the warm, fresh air for several days after washing them will make them light, fresh and fluffy.

A Tea Time Story

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

ONCE upon a time there lived a Princess who was very beautiful and who was sought in marriage by three noble suitors. And as all three were equally handsome, and rich and well born, it was decided that, as customary in fairy tales, a task should be set to them and who best succeeded should be rewarded with the hand of the Princess.

Thereupon the Princess called her first suitor and said: "To-morrow there is a ball at court and I am going to wear a wonderful blue dress. And with this blue dress I want to wear a nosegay of perfect blue roses. Please get them for me."

"Blue roses?" said the Prince. "Why, they don't exist. You mean red roses, of course."

"I mean blue roses," said the Princess sharply. "If I had meant red I should have said so. I want blue roses and I want them quickly."

The Prince argued the question, brought the botanical atlas and the garden almanac, quoted Linnaeus, De Candolle and other authorities, and proved very clearly that it was utterly unscientific to ask for blue roses, but the Princess wanted none of his wisdom. He had to leave the court, hurt and disappointed, and the Princess called her second suitor.

"To-morrow there is a ball at court," she said, "and with my lovely blue dress I want to wear a bouquet of blue roses. Will you get them for me?"

"Willingly," said the Prince. "I shall set out at once." And with this he mounted his good steed and hurried away to find the blue roses for the Princess. But though he searched everywhere and looked into every garden, and knocked at all the parks and palaces his quest was in vain. He never found blue roses and he had finally to return to his own kingdom a saddened and lonely man.

The Princess, however, called her third suitor and said: "To-morrow there is a ball at court and I need a nosegay of blue roses. Do you think you can get them for me?"

"Nothing easier," replied the Prince. "My sister has a whole garden full of blue roses and does not know what to do with them. You know, in our country blue roses are considered terribly passe, and my sister will be delighted that there is still some one so quaintly old-fashioned as to like blue roses. I shall send at once for a basket of them."

"Oh, never mind," said the Princess, "I suppose red roses will do just as well," and the next day she married him, and so far as I know they lived happily ever after.

Many years later the three Princes met at a hunt and after a day's hard riding and an evening's hard drinking they became at midnight very confidential and spoke about courtship and marriage, men and women, ideal and reality, love and blue roses.

And the first Prince said: "Blue roses—how foolish! Women possess no intellect."

And the second Prince said: "Blue roses—how tragic! Women are faithless even to their dreams."

And the third Prince said: "Blue roses—how unnecessary! If you only know how to handle a woman you do not need blue roses."

But while he said this there sat in the moonlit garden on a marble bench his own young daughter with a gallant young knight. Their eyes were shining, their hands touched timidly, the glow of a first passion blushed on their cheeks, and in a tender voice the young Princess asked her knight—as Youth will always ask Love—to bring her blue roses.

PARIS, March.

Juul's Pig

On the outskirts of Lier, a small town not far from Antwerp, lives a peasant named Juul de Peyster. Juul, who was questioned on the status of business the other day, remarked, among other things, that the times when the Germans occupied Flanders were not so bad as people generally believed. In explanation of this unpatriotic heresy the peasant said that in the winter of 1917, which was a very cold winter, the Germans ran short of pork. Nobody in Lier was allowed to sell his pigs or kill them, awaiting an inventory to be made by the "Kommandantur." Juul had only one pig, but it was a beauty. He said he hated to see the beast confiscated and sent to Germany for sausage. A patrol of the "Heimwehr," bearded Bavarian home guards, came around one day and wrote down everything in connection with Juul's pig. Then they went away. Juul thought that was all there was to it, so he killed the pig and had a fine snack for many a day and a few cents in pocket. Some time later he saw the patrol coming in the direction of his farm. Juul took fright. He ran to town by another road, went to the German command and reported that his pig was stolen. An investigation was ordered. The documents were found and, to be sure, they showed Juul to have been the owner of a fine pig. The case dragged on. Juul had other things to think about. Then one day the patrol came back once more and the Sergeant handed Juul a letter. He was frightened to death, ran to the tailor, the only man in Lier who knows German, and had the letter read. It said: Whereas, the citizen, Juul de Peyster, has had a pig stolen; whereas, that pig has been found back through the care of the Kommandantur, the owner is hereby ordered to take same pig away from the communal pound at Lier, failing which, &c." "Never had a pig for nothing before," said Juul. "Don't you call that good times?"

Next War

Forty million dead is the figure that Victor Meric, well-known French writer, arrives at, in a book on the next last war which he imagines to be fought with chemicals and unheard of instruments of destruction. No Government, he says, once it is at war, will be able to afford to do without all the means at its disposal to win. Hence all will utilize the latest and most infernal inventions. What Meric imagines is something so horrible that it passes description. Yet it is not quite exaggeration. Meric seems to know of what he is talking. He quotes the armament experts and the latest military textbooks. He has interviewed men of science, who know what is going on in the laboratories. If it ever comes to a crash again, half the human race will be wiped out or crippled. No hope to humanize war, according to Meric. The only thing is to abolish it, because it is insanity. He thinks that if the statesmen and bankers and armament manufacturers and war profiteers once get a notion of hat would be in store also for them—for there would be no front line and all citizens would be exposed to the terrors of gas bombs—they will be ready to give up and work for the outlawry of war. So there is a ray of hope after all in the dismal picture that the French master of the word has drawn.

Japanese Troops

The news reels, not the least interesting of the movie business, brought the cinema audiences in Paris this week a glimpse of the Japanese Emperor passing some of his crack regiments in review. There is no doubt but that his Imperial Majesty may be proud of his warriors. They certainly know how to march and manoeuvre. The Kaiser in the good old Potsdam days had none better, though the Pomeranians might have been a bit bigger. At the close of the review the Chief of the General Staff was seen to walk up to the Emperor and to say something to him. The Emperor was seen to smile. What did the Chief of the General Staff say? He just said what all chiefs of all general staffs of all countries and all times said to their Emperors and Kings, namely this: "Your Majesty has the best soldiers in the world!" To which the Emperor gave the traditional response so often heard in the late war: "Yes, it's a fine body of men!" This time it was in Japanese, of course.

The Farmer's Advice

By Alfalfa Smith

I TAKE off my hat to the old fashioned doctor. Do you remember him?

You went to see him and he asked a lot of questions. You answered them and then he told you what was the matter with you. He would reach up, take a bottle and give you some very, very bitter pills.

He was called your "family doctor."

As he was called this, I assume he is disappearing for the reason that the family life in America is disappearing.

But with it all I have learned this one thing—BEING ILL IS VERY EXPENSIVE.

Gradually I am learning to TAKE IT EASY.

Keeping Plants Indoors

Dust allowed to accumulate on plants will stop up their pores and prevent their drawing nourishment from the air surrounding them. When outdoors the rain washes away the dust. Therefore, when indoors, it is quite important to spray and wash plants. Place them in the bathtub and use the bath spray. The water should be, as near as possible, the temperature of summer rain. Be sure and spray the foliage from underneath as well as from the top.

Smoke will sometimes kill insects but those white, mealy bugs, that look like bits of cotton are pertinacious and the only sure way to get rid of these plant destroyers is to pick them off.

Verbenas make attractive borders and are nice for porch and window boxes. Sow seeds indoors in March and transplant in May to insure a long and prolific blooming season.

The Beauty Shop

Where Hair Is a Blemish

"READER" asks this beauty column "Why do some girls get superfluous hair on their faces? What is the cause and what is the cure, if any? And how can it be stopped? This is something that has been causing me a great deal of worry.

There were a few superfluous hairs on my chin, I plucked them out, and now more seem to be coming in their place" * * *

What is the cause? Climate, heredity, the wrong type of skin treatment, any one of these things may be the cause of superfluous hair—put together. Though hardly climate, in our quarter of the globe.

We shall talk about the wrong type of skin treatment, since something can be done about that, whereas with heredity, well——

What is the corrective par excellence for thinning hair? No, not the use of hair tonics or magic ointments but friction. It is the elbow-grease, the rubbing that does the trick. And so it is with many an upper lip and many a chin.

Given a face with the down of a peach, the vigorous habitual application of friction, especially with the aid of fatty soaps and creams (preparations that contain animal fats), and one does not have to be a clairvoyant to foretell the future of that face. It is pretty well destined to become hirsute. Tweeze or pluck away the unwanted sprouts without doing anything else about them and the face becomes a bitter problem.

Obviously, "Reader," your problem demands expert attention. We suggest that you cease plucking and for the moment cease worrying about causes and put your chin in the hands of one who specializes in the removal of superfluous hair. A reliable person, of course.

You may, if you care to use the old and entirely safe peroxide-ammonia solution, but for hairs that have grown beyond the downy stage infinite patience is required before results are visible. Begin the treatment with a mixture of one-third ammonia to two-thirds peroxide of hydrogen, later increasing the strength to a half and half solution.

Saturate strips of absorbent cotton in the liquid and place over the superfluous hair area. Let the compresses remain on the skin as long as convenient or comfortable. The skin may flare up as one consequence. If it does, simply discontinue the treatment for a day or two, meanwhile bathing the affected part with fresh sweet milk instead of water. One other thing the treatment will do—and with fair promptness—it will bleach the unwanted growth to some degree of invisibility.

And there we have told you all the do's and don'ts connected with this very difficult beauty problem. We have not said anything on the subject of ready prepared depilatories because, in the first place, you already know that they exist, and, in the second place, there are depilatories and depilatories, and we are not at liberty to suggest brands.

Select Earrings Wisely

EARRINGS should be chosen with great care as they so strongly influence the expression of the face. Of course, they should be selected with careful reference to the costume with which they are to be worn.

The close-fitting button earrings have a widening effect and can well be worn by the slender-faced woman. The woman with broad features should wear the slender pendant earrings of moderate length, while the heavier pendant earrings will be a good choice for the woman who requires a little increase in the width of the face.

Very long earrings are becoming to the tall, slender woman, especially if she has a distinguished carriage, but should be avoided by the short or the heavy person, as they shorten the neck and this has a bad effect on the entire figure. The average woman can wear these long earrings but not to the best effect, and the woman with a scrawny neck or a sagging contour at the side of the face will be wise if she avoids earrings altogether.

Spring Cleaning Hints

If there is any paint left after you finish painting, pour melted paraffin over the top of it, just as you do on your jelly, and you will find the paint in excellent condition next time you want to use it.

Use the old tennis racket to beat the rugs and carpets and it will not hurt the hand nor will it damage the rugs.

Oh, Go to Bed

By Eliot Kays Stone

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

"DAD, why does Bridget crank the stove?"

"Crank the stove! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Why, she cranks it every day, and sometimes Ma does, and you do, too."

"Oh, that's not cranking the stove. That's shaking the grate."

"Why shake the grate?"

"To get rid of the ashes."

"Why get rid of the ashes?"

"Because the ashes won't burn and they dampen the fire."

"The ashes aren't wet. How can they dampen the fire?"

"Oh, go to bed!"

Blouses Are Varied

SINCE the suit makes the blouse a necessary part of the fashion picture for spring, designers of these separate garments have appropriated not only the details of the new dresses but the fabrics and colors as well.

Tuck-ins retain all their smartness but overblouses are newly interesting by virtue of their altered appearance. If long, they are frankly so, usually showing the peplum influence. The newest version of the overblouse, however, is short, cut to just cover the top of the skirt, finished in a narrow band, tying in a bow or with the waistline defined by a belt.

The bellhop blouse is double breasted, cut off sharply at the waistline and is suitable for the younger generation.

Blouses are divided against themselves, some being extremely feminine and very pretty, while others are as masculine as the proverbial shirt. The latter are designed to be hidden inside the suit, while blouses with frills, cape collars and other dressmaker details are meant to show a bit.

Flat crepe still is a smart blouse fabric, but such novelties as shantung in white or pastel that are good in semi-tailored and sports blouses. Eyelet embroidery, net and dotted swiss are cottons that impart a feminine air to the tailored suit. Satin striped shirtings strike a new note with tweed suits.

Although white is important for spring blouses, baby blue, pale pink, Violonet rose, Patou's rose opaline, the amber tones, pale shades of yellow and the new eggshell are modish pastels.

Selecting the Necklace

NEVER have beads and necklaces been in such demand as they are now and there is probably no other item of jewelry that has a stronger effect upon the face and figure than these neck adornments.

A round face will appear much rounder if a choker necklace is worn. These close fitting beads, especially if they are round, increase the roundness of the face. The face will also appear wider, the neck will seem shorter and thicker and the figure will seem shorter. The small size beads will accentuate the round contour more so than the choker of graduated beads.

The long necklace gives the appearance of length to the face. In fact it adds to the apparent height and slenderness of the wearer, especially if a pendant is attached to give a V effect to the necklace.

The necklace of medium length is especially becoming to the oval face but should be avoided by the overdeveloped figure.

A New Use for Linoleum

A housewife wanted a tile wainscoting in her bathroom, but considering this too expensive she hit upon the idea of substituting linoleum.

She got in touch with a plastering contractor who assured her it could be glued right on the wall.

She selected a suitable inlaid pattern and with her husband's assistance the linoleum wainscoting was applied and finished off with a moulding.

They were so greatly pleased with the result that they put a wainscoting of inlaid linoleum in the kitchen, "and the best of it is," says the little woman, "it cost so much less than a tile or inlaid wood and, so far, we like it quite as well."

Fabrics for Hats

IT is more interesting to note of what spring hats are made than how they are designed, for the medium is a link between costume and the general ensemble.

The effort of Patou and Agnes to raise the crown is little evident in the new models as yet, for crowns are very shallow, moulding the head smoothly, with brims sweeping in various directions from the hairline. In small hats the brim is apt to turn back sharply to expose the face. Larger brims are done in the directoire manner.

STATESMANSHIP A LA MODE

SENATORS are jamming through high tariff rates by trading with each other. A solon from a lumber State votes new altitudes for sugar duties if the Senators from sugar States will boost the rate of shingles, logs and wooden nutmegs. There is so much back-scratching going on, you would think all the Senators had the hives.

Scene in the Senate cloakroom:

SENATOR SNITZ — Well, Senator Bogle, how you standing on dried beetles?

SENATOR BOGLE—I'll tell you, Senator. I'm for having 'em come in free. I understand a lot of our basic industries use dried beetles and it'll keep prices down for the ultimate consumer.

SNITZ—That may be so, Senator Bogle, but do you realize my State raises 60 per cent. of the dried beetles in the United States?

BOGLE—No, Senator, I didn't. That's worth knowing.

SNITZ—And another thing: The peasants in Czecho-Slovakia raise dried beetles for $1.10 a ton. They don't have cost of living like my constituents do. The result is them foreigners sell their beetles in this country cheaper than my people can dry 'em, let alone sort 'em for shipment, pack 'em, &c.

BOGLE—Is that a fact?

SNITZ—I can prove it with statistics. Now, Senator, I'd appreciate it if you could see your way to vote for 90 per cent. ad valorem duty on foreign dried beetles. It would be a patriotic thing to do.

BOGLE—Well, Senator, I dunno. How you standing on duty rates for glass doorknobs?

SNITZ—I'm inclined to have 'em on the free list, Senator. Glass doorknobs pretty up the looks of a home and I think the American citizen should have 'em at the lowest cost.

BOGLE—Senator Snitz, do you happen to know my State of Minnesconsin has six large glass doorknob foundries? If we let Serbian doorknobs in free, it means 40,000 constituents of mine will starve.

SNITZ—Tell you what I'll do, Senator. You vote for high protective duties on dried beetles and I'll vote for a stiff ad valorem on glass doorknobs. Not only that, but I'll make a speech.

BOGLE—Senator Snitz, that's fine. Count me in to support increased tariff on dried beetles and I'll mark your vote down for glass doorknob protection.

SNITZ—Okay. Now, Senator, seeing we understand each other, I got a six-cylinder Bohunk sedan I've only drove 8,000 miles and I was wondering if you'd consent to take it in exchange for your radio set.

BOGLE—I'm afraid it wouldn't be a fair trade, Senator, seeing as how I just spent $16 for new tubes. But I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you my radio for your Bohunk sedan if you'll throw in your vote for the Boulder Dam project.

SNITZ—I dunno about that. Senator Glutz offered me a vacuum cleaner and 500 cigar coupons for my Boulder Dam vote. And he'll let me keep the spare tire off my Bohunk.

BOGLE—That's a pretty fair offer, Senator, and better than I can do. Anyhow, I don't want to trade my radio. But how you going to vote on dredging Sankaty Harbor?

SNITZ—I'm agin it, good and proper!

BOGLE—Senator, you're just the man I want to talk to. See these snappy picture postcards of art poses a friend of mine brought me from Paris? Well, they're yours, along with this pocketful of marbles, for your vote on dredging Sankaty Harbor.

SNITZ—Done! I always was fond of snappy pictures.

Occasionally among the balderdash that is offered on the screen today there appears a photoplay which seems to have some motivation for being produced, a work thoughtfully written, intelligently directed and beautifully acted. Such a work is "Anna Christie" Greta Garbo's first all talking picture, which opened last night at the Fox-California theater.

That this work is superior to anything projected from Hollywood studios in some time should cause no surprise, considering the artisans who had a hand in its making. Of Eugene O'Neill, author of the play from which the film was adapted, it is hardly necessary to say anything, the brilliant playwright having definitely left his mark on the century; Clarence Brown, who directed the work is recognized as one of the most competent generals on the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer staff and seems to have achieved a particular forte in handling Miss Garbo as a result of directing her in two of her greatest productions "Flesh and the Devil" and the more recent "A Woman of Affairs"; as for Miss Garbo herself, no picture in which she has appeared does more to uphold her reputatio as the finest actress on the screen today than "Anna Christis," in which she is given the opportunity of using her voice.

Furthermore, the picture has been saved from minor blurs in the selection of George F. Marion for the role of Chris, the father; Marie Dressler for the part of the drunken slut, Marthy, and Charles Bickford as the brawny seaman, Matt. Marion, who plays the role for the third time, having had it in the original stage version and later in the silent picture version made some years ago, handles the part with an assurance which only such experience could have given him. Miss Dressler, on the other hand, makes an amazing transition from comedy parts to the utterly slovenly and despairing role of the drunken hag. It is undoubtedly the outstanding performance in Miss Dressler's career.

ESCAPES FROM JAIL, SHOT IN HAND

the officer's car and leaped into the street, only to be recaptured a few seconds later.

Placed in the city jail, Chief of Police R. R. Cheek gave orders that Williams be closely guarded.

Car Stolen

At the El Cerrito city jail Williams gave his name as H. H. Hacker of 927 Jefferson street, Oakland. Police, in checking his record, declared that they found the car that he was driving had been stolen.

Williams was then placed in a cell at the El Cerrito city jail and a close guard was ordered placed over him.

At noon he was removed to an adjoining cell to eat his dinner. While the jailer was outside, he picked the lock on the cell door with his fork and again escaped.

Seen By Burnett

Fire Engineer Ora Burnett, who lives in a house in the rear of the city hall, saw Williams walk by his window.

Burnett ran into the street to give chase at the minute Officer Peralta drove up, preparing to turn in his report before going off shift.

Peralta and Burnett immediately started in pursuit of Williams who ran around a nearby building.

Finally cornered by Burnett and Peralta, he dashed across the street, in the direction of a chicken shack.

Two Shots Fired

Drawing his pistol, Peralta called to Williams to halt. He refused to do so. Peralta leveled his pistol and fired twice. One shot struck Williams on the left hand and the second tore a hole in his overcoat. He halted and surrendered.

Taken to the Humboldt hospital, he received first aid treatment and was then removed to the El Cerrito city jail.

At the city jail he was questioned by Chief of Police R. R. Chek. Williams refused, however, to say anything except that he had something "confidential" to tell Chief Cheek if he were taken to Martinez.

Heavily Guarded

Fearing that the prisoner would again attempt to escape, Cheek took with him two officers who sat in the rear seat of his car watching Williams.

At Martinez, Chief Cheek said, Williams admitted his true name and told authorities that he was a parole violator. As far as it could be learned, Williams was arrested in Michigan on a charge of theft of a machine and was sentenced to serve five years. After serving 14 months of his sentence, he was paroled, with instructions not to leave the state.

Immediately after his release from prison he came to California where he has been living.

Chief Cheek wired authorities in the east that he is holding Williams and asked for instructions.

Real Mother Love Inspires George Jessel

George Jessel, whose first starring Fox Movietone all talking drama will be heard and seen on the Fox-California theater screen tomorrow, has always been inspired in his work by his mother —a mother who strove to make her boy the ideal of her dream.

Mrs. Jessel has been the guiding spirit of her son's career since he first started on the vaudeville stage and many times when it seemed as if he could not reach his goal the mother spirit flashed before him and he struggled harder than ever.

Jessel, all during his vaudeville carer, played sketches with a mother theme.

The boy's love for his mother is nothing short of an idealized worship and while today she is a widow, her son is husband, father and comforter extraordinary to her.

In "Love, Live and Laugh" Jessel is surrounded by an unusually fine cast that includes such outstanding players as Lila Lee, Kenneth MacKenna, David Rollins, Henry Kolker, Marcia Manon and Henry Armetta. William K. Howard directed this all talking Fox Movietone drama, in which George Jessel sings two melodies especially written by L. Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Baer. The songs are "A Song of Margharita" and "Two Little Baby Arms."

Also on the program is a special added attraction, the complete fight pictures of Jackie Fields and Young Corbett III.

The jury will adjourn late tomorrow, to meet again next Monday. At that time it will probably hear Van Noy.

Drew Named Chief

Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, Frank Colbourn today announced the appointment of James Drew as Chief of Police of Oakland.

Drew, who was head of the police bureau under Colbourn when the latter was once before commissioner, supplants Donald Marshall, an appointee of C. C. Young, commissioner who resigned when threatened with grand jury accusation of accepting fees from paving concerns while in office.

A general shakeup in the police department was expected shortly.

The city council today adopted a policy of refusing to give city contracts to firms indicted or refusing to testify during the paving graft investigation.

Mayor John L. Davie instigated this policy, and stated that the firms in question were "not responsible."

Postponement of the arraignment of former Commissioner William Parker, his secretary Ray Lamberson, and Jack Garbutt, paving contractor, until Tuesday, was allowed to day by Superior Judge Fred V. Wood on motion of Leo Sullivan, defense council.

Site Survey

The federal government meanwhile is taking steps to complete a survey of all possible barrier sites.

Under the direction of Maj. E. H. Ropes of San Francisco, a crew of 35 government engineers is surveying Suisun bay from Martinez eastward. When this phase of the work is completed, the engineers will work westward as far as Point San Pablo.

The survey, which is one of the most exhaustive ever made by the government in this section, will be accomplished in about six months.

Under the direction of C. A. Mees, another crew is working on an economic survey, and a third crew is studying the effect on navigation, silting tides, etc., under the directon of George F. Whitemore.

ODD FELLOWS OPEN 49 CAMP

Richmond residents were transported back nearly a hundred years last night, when the Odd Fellow '49 camp, depicting the age of the gold rush, opened in the downstairs hall of the Odd Fellows building.

Although no official estimate had been made as to the number of visitors who attended the celebration, the hall was packed nearly to capacity until the closing hour.

The celebration opened with a mammoth parade at 7:30 which started at Twenty-third street and Macdonald avenue, and wended its way to Sixth street and back to the Odd Fellow hall.

49 Costumes

At the hall, the program was opened with an old time dance by the '49'ers, attired in red shirts, knee boots, sombreros, and one and all displaying several weeks growth of beard.

Their dancing partners, members of the Rebekah lodge were dressed in the old fashioned long flowing gowns with bustles and balloon sleeves.

Following the dance, vocal solos were sung by Miss Muriel Scherruble and Mrs. Nellie MacCauley.

Skits Presented

The Matilda Meyer Kiddies also gave skits. Children who took part in the program were: Beverly Penman, Lorraine Hasey, Betty Jane Johnson, Jeanne Johansen, Betty Archibald, Elaine McConnell, Helen Collins, Esther Fratangelo, Betty Jean Alveras, Meyna Latorraca, Shirley Orthman and Ross Hart, with Miss Emma Meyer, accompanist.

Following the program, music was provided by Mrs. Cobine's orchestra, and the guests enjoyed dancing.

The various booths in the hall did a lucrative business according to reports.

The celebration will continue today and tomorrow, with a special lunch for business folks to be served today and tomorrow between 11 and two o'clock.

BOOSTER CLUB ENTERTAINED AT DANCE

Members of the Booster Club of the Fraternal Brotherhood were entertained last night at a party held in the W. C. Kates home, 2820 Esmond avenue.

Dancing was enjoyed during the evening. New and old time dances were enjoyed by the group.

At the conclusion of the party refreshments were served by the hostess.

Next Thursday night the group will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. George Hasey, 436 Thirteenth street.

More than 50 persons attended last night's party.

Stege Aid To Elect Heads

Election of officers will be held at a meeting of the Stege Presbyterian Ladies Aid society in the church parlors at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. W. J. McCarthy, president, will preside at the meeting.

During the social afternoon which will follow the meeting, Mrs. V. E. Skiles will review a chapter from the missionary book, "Blind Stops."

During the afternoon the women will also work on the quilt they are making.

Mrs. F. C. Lewis Of Visalia Here

TORCHBEARERS TO PRESENT PLAY

Two casts are hard at work rehearsing for the play "Chickens" which will be presented by the Torchbearers of the Longfellow Junior high school at Roosevelt Junior high school auditorium April 4.

The presentation is a three act comedy, exceedingly refreshing in its rustic setting. Chickens are of vital importance to a happy little family whose life is filled with the joys and tribulations of everyday experiences.

The identity of one of the leading figures lends an element of mystery to the plot and holds the interest throughout the play.

The cast for production is being selected by Miss Irma Kruse who is directing the class.

El Cerrito Man's Sentence Monday

Charles W. Miller, 550 Albemarle road, El Cerrito, who was found guilty of disturbing the peace by Police Judge Edward J. Tyrrell of Oakland, will appear for sentence Monday.

Miller was arrested in east Oakland the night of March 11, and turned over to police by C. W. Bethel, 1900 Eighty-seventh street, Oakland, who told authorities he had seen Miller peeping in the bedroom of Mrs. Melvin Nicholson, 2063 Eighty-seventh street. Mrs. Nicholson swore to the complaint.

Local Merchants Support Buying Stand Of Long

A resolution endorsing the stand of Supervisor James N. Long in his effort to keep the business of Contra Costa county among the merchants of the county as far as possible, was unanimously adopted by directors of the Richmond Merchants' association yesterday.

"We believe there are a lot of purchasers for county offices and institutions made outside the county which could just as well be made through merchants of Contra Costa county," said Clark Bargar, president of the Richmond Merchants association. "There are some things, perhaps, which must of necessity come from outside sources, but we believe there are many things bought outside, which could be purchased in the county but upon which Contra Costa merchants who have places of business and pay their taxes here, are never even asked to give a figure. We are heartily back of Supervisor Long in his very definite stand for the merchants of the county."

High Band May Enter Contest

The Richmond union high school band is expected to enter the annual contest of the North Coast Public School Band and Orchestra association May 9 at Vallejo.

The bands participating in the meet will be from Contra Costa, Sonoma, Napa, Marin and Solano counties.

The Richmond union high school band is directed by George Morris.

AVENUE LIGHT PLAN GIVEN MERCHANTS

A report on the plan for better lighting on Macdonald avenue was given before the board of directors of the Richmond Merchant's association by Al Furrer, chairman of the lighting committee yesterday.

E. A. Hoffman, city engineer was also present, and presented figures showing that under the plan proposed for lighting Macdonald avenue with a better system, the cost per lot would be raised from $9 to $12 per year. This he declared would depend on the amount of candle power the lights used.

Installation and upkeep of six 1000 candle power lamps per block from Twenty-first to Twenty-third streets on Macdonald avenue, under a plan to turn a portion of the lamps off at midnight, Hoffman estimated, would amount to about $9 per lot per year.

Hoffman said that should it be decided to raise the candle power in the higher rent district to 1500 candle power lamps, the cost would be several dollars higher. He also declared that under the plan to use 1000 candle power lamps, six to a block, the lighting on Macdonald avenue would be increased about four times.

According to Furrer's report, his committee is working out details by which property owners would be asked to give their assent to the plan. He also said there was a general approval of the project.

SPORTS

SOCCER TEAM WILL MEET HAYWARD

The Richmond soccer club will compete against the Hayward eleven in the semi-finals of the East-bay Junior Soccer league Sunday. The contest will be played at the Oakland Trotting park at 1 o'clock.

The Richmond-Hayward game will be followed at 2:45 o'clock by another semi-final match between the Phoenix and Ibericoe clubs. The winners of these two contests will clash in the finals of the league Mar. 30.

Richmond will have no easy opponent to face at the Oakland Trotting park Sunday. Hayward possessed a higher league standing at the end of the regular league schedule than the ranking then held by the local athletes. Hayward has a swift attack that is liable to do grave damage unless the Richmond guards are playing their very best brand of soccer.

In any case, the Richmond goal will be amply guarded by Earl Jester, who has been playing phenomenal soccer as goal keeper during the last month. Several of Richmond's recent victories were directly due to the goal guarding of Jester.

Corey's Nine May Tangle With Tires

The Corey Garage nine will probably play the Giorgias Tires of San Francisco Sunday afternoon on the El Cerrito diamond. Arrangements for the contest are not yet final.

If the Corey Garagemen do play Sunday, Brendel will twirl for the local squad, while San Miguel will do the receiving for the garagemen.

Brendel and San Miguel have made quite a sensation as the new Corey battery. Brendel has a fast one that does great damage to aspiring sluggers, but his fast ball is nothing to San Miguel behind the platter. Brendel and San Miguel have taken the place evacuated by John Babich and John Rosano, who are now playing with the Richmond Union high school nine.

The El Cerrito diamond is being levelled and rearranged in preparation for the coming season.

Oakland Rookies Defeat Regulars

CHING JOHNSON, famous hockey player of the Ranger's in New York wears this contrivance in an attempt to protect his jaw broken some time ago. Some of Primo Carnera's opponents might give the idea a try.

Inter Class Track Meet Postponed

The annual inter-class track meet at Richmond union high school scheduled for yesterday afternoon was postponed because of minor injuries sustained during the past week by the high school athletes.

The members of the high school track team have been practicing strenuously at their special events this week. As a result, there is an end-of-the-week crop of sprained ankles and sore leg muscles.

The much postponed inter-class event will probably be held next Tuesday.

It is expected that a meet with the Richmond union high school alumni will be staged sometime during the next two weeks.

High Swimming Club Growing

The membership of the Richmond union high school swimming club is rapidly growing as the high school girls succeed in passing the tests for entrance into the club.

The girls who have passed the swimming tests are: Ruth Brown Alice Flynn, Louise Bowen, Thelma Grice, Irene Rollino, Jenny Bellegarde, Gerda Dahlgren, Irene Navy, Dorothy Oswell, Dorothy Ramsey, Marjorie Woods, and Eloise Krumdick.

Santa Fe Five To Meet Roseville On Richmond Court

The Richmond Santa Fe apprentices will clash with the Roseville Southern Pacific cagers at the Richmond union high school gymnasium Saturday night.

The local Santa Fe quintet was a close contender for the title in this season's Richmond City basketball league, tying for second place with the Studebakers. The Roseville boys may therefore expect strong opposition Saturday evening when they make the long trip from Roseville.

The contest is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock.

Senators Hold Batting Drill

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—UP—The Sacramento Senators were put through heavy batting practice today due to the poor showing with the stick for the last several days. The hitting spree that followed the game with the Oaks last week-end was apparently only temporary.

Donald Oswill Visits Parents

Donald Oswill, catcher on the Stanford varsity nine, is staying for a short time at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oswill 620 Thirty-second street, Richmond.

He will leave for Los Angeles Sunday morning to take part in the Stanford-University of Southern California contest. Oswil! is a junior student at Stanford university. This is his second season on the Stanford varsity baseball squad.

Oswill is a former pupil of Richmond Union high school.

High School 9 To Clash With Berkeley Team

The varsity baseball team of Richmond union high school is confident that it wi'l be able to send the Berkeley high school nine back to Berkeley defeated when the two teams tangle on the First street lot today.

The chances of the local baseball outfit today are fair judging by the showing made by Berkeley high this week when it lost to Alameda high by a score of 13 to 3. A'though superior to the Richmond high school athletes in basketball, it seems as if the Berkeleyans are found lacking in strength during the baseball season.

Babich and Rosano are expected to compose Richmond's starting battery this afternoon. Lemon and Bono will be ready to step into the box in case Babich weakens.

The local high school varsity wi'l meet the Emeryville aggregation Tuesday afternoon at Emeryville.

The Richmond squad in today's contest with Berkeley high school will probably consist of "Lefty" Scarcella, first; Stoddard, second; Degnan, third; Sanfilippo, shortstop; Shubat or Babich, left field; Heise, center field and Rogers, right field.

Hi-Y Girls Win 2 Contests From Girl Reserves

The Girls' Hi-Y were victorious over the Richmond Union high school Girl Reserves both in a volleyball and basketball contest last night in the boys gmn at the high school.

The Girls' Hi-Y won the basketball game by a score of 34 to 19.

The Girls' Hi-Y was victorious in the volleyball contest by a 14 to 24 score.

Preceding the games, the members of both clubs held a luncheon.

At the regular meeting of the Girl Reserves last night, plans were made for an overnight hike to Williow Camp, Stinson Beach, in Marin county, March 29.

CRUCIAL GAME FOR MOTORS SUNDAY

The Thomas Motors will enter the most critical period in their career in the Oakland Winter baseball league next Sunday when they clash with the Oakland Eagles in the league finals. The contest will be played on the First street diamond at two o'clock.

Doyle Taylor wi'l be back on the mound again for the Motors on Sunday. The members of the Thomas squad were greatly dismayed when Taylor left the local team to report at the Mission training camp. Now there is rejoicing in the ranks of the local outfit, for Taylor has returned from Coast league baseball, and is ready to show his o'd speed on the mound for the locals again. Vierra, P. S., E. A. chucker, and Sil Campana will be ready to relieve Taylor if the latter tires. Gualdoni will be behind the platter for the Thomas nine.

If the local athletes win Sunday's game, they will be league titlists. If the Oaklanders capture the victory, a three-game playoff will be necessary to give the final decision.

Junior Nine To Meet Merchants

The 115 pound baseball squad of Roosevelt Junior high school will see action for the first time this season when it clashes with the San Pablo Merchants Saturday morning at the Roosevelt diamond.

The junior high school lightweights athletes have been practicing steadily for almost a month and should be able to present the San Pablo veterans with strong opposition Saturday morning.

The varsity Teddies are also busily preparing for the coming season, although no definite schedule has yet been arranged.

Announcing Another P·G·and E· Electric Rate Reduction

$2,400,000.00 Saving to Consumers

Now, electric rates for consumers of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company are reduced over Two Million, Four Hundred Thousand Dollars a year.

Lighting rates are cut to a maximum rate of 4½ cents per kilowatt hour for incorporated areas, with a similar reduction in all areas.

The new rates are of greatest benefit to the small consumer—the residence user, stores and offices. Substantial reductions have been made in commercial, industrial and agricultural power rates. Street lighting rates are reduced.

Domestic combination rates for consumers using lighting service and in addition having electric appliances for heating and/or cooking, are as low as 1½ cents per kilowatt hour. The new commercial lighting schedules provide for lighting rates as low as 2 cents per kilowatt hour.

These new schedules providing lower electric rates are designed to encourage liberal usage of electricity at low cost. The new rates are among the lowest obtainable anywhere.

ELECTRICITY IS CHEAPER—YOU CAN USE MORE—MAKE IT YOUR SERVANT

Let electricity brighten the gloomy corners. Let it do the cooking, ironing, washing. Let it sweep the floors, operate the electric fan, drive away chills. It will percolate the coffee, make the toast, keep food warm or cool and wholesome.

Modern electric appliances bring comfort, convenience and economy.

The GREEN GODDESS
by LOUISE JORDAN MILN

Copyright, 1922, by Frederick A. Stokes Company

"The Green Goddess," starring George Arliss, is a Warner Bros. Vitaphone picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Held prisoners after a forced airplane landing in a Himalayan fog, Dr. Basil Traherne and his passengers, Major Anthony Crespin and his estranged wife, Lucilla (whom Traherne loves), are held prisoners in the palace of the Raja of Rukh. They are to be sacrificed to the native green goddess on the day that the Raja's three half brothers are executed in India for a political murder. The Englishmen bribe the Raja's English valet to send a wireless appeal for rescue. He sends a fake mesage and they kill him. The Major sends the message just as the Raja breaks into the room and shoots him.

CHAPTER XXXI—Continued

Traherne looked about him hurriedly and demanded: "What have you done with Mrs. Crespin?"

"Don't be alarmed. She will be here in due time."

"Listen to me, Raja," Traherne said earnestly. "Do what you will with me, but let Mrs. Crespin go. Send her to India or to Russia, and I am sure, for her children's sake, she will swear to keep absolute silence as to her husband's fate and mine."

"You don't believe, then, that I couldn't save you if I would?" Rukh demanded.

"Believe it?" Traherne scoffed. "No!"

"You are quite right, my dear Doctor. I am not a High Priest for nothing. I might work the oracle.

"He said in a month I might have them in my arms."

I might get a command from the Goddess to hurt no hair upon your heads."

"Then," Traherne asked, "what devilish pleasure do you find in putting us to death?"

"Pleasure?" Rukh echoed. "The pleasure of a double vengeance. Vengeance for today—my brothers—and vengeance for centuries of subjection and insult. Do you know what brought you here?" he said with sudden smothered passion. "It was not blind chance, any more than it was the Goddess. It was my will, my craving for revenge, that drew you here by a subtle, irresistible magnetism. My will is my religion—my god. And by that god I have sworn that you shall not escape me. Ah," he broke off, speaking calmly, as wild yells broke from the now frenzied crowd outside, "they are bringing Mrs. Crespin."

A priest was unbolting the door through which they had carried him, and when it was opened wide she was brought, through the door into the grim, dark hall. But she had come in more state. Her chair was rich and gilded, and cushioned. She too was bound. Her face was white and fixed, but her glowing eyes were brave.

The Raja went to her at once, and bent as he said, "I apologize, Madam, for the manners of my people. Their fanaticism is beyond my control." She did not reply.

"How long have we left?" Traherne asked, as the men were taking the empty palanquin away.

Rukh answered at once, "Till the sun's rim touches the crest of the mountains. A blast of our great mountain-horn will announce the appointed hour, and you will be led out to the sacred enclosure. You saw the colossal image of the Goddess out yonder?"

Traherne barely glanced to where the Raja pointed. Lucilla's eyes did not leave Traherne's face.

"Will you grant us one last request?" the Englishman asked.

"By all means," was the suave reply, "if it is in my power. I am anxious to show you every consideration."

"Then," Traherne said earnestly, "you will leave us alone for the time that remains to us?"

"Why, by all means. And oh, by the way, you need have no fear of the—ceremony—being protracted. It will be brief and—I trust—painless. The High Church Party are not incapable of cruelty; but I have resolutely set my face against it."

He paused a moment, irresolute, debating with himself. Then he quietly stepped close to Lucilla Crespin who stood gazing stonily into space.

"Before I go, Madam," he said, "may I remind you of my offer of yesterday? It is not too late." She took no notice. "Is it just to your children to refuse?" he urged. Traherne saw her hands tremble, but she did not speak. Her fixed and rigid face gave no sign.

Rukh waited. Still she gave no sign.

"Immovable?" he said at last. "So be it!" And he turned to go. But a great yell of triumphant hatred weltered up from the waiting people outside and the Raja turned back, and spoke to her once more.

"Your husband's body, Madam," he told her, watching her narrowly. "They are laying it at the feet of the Goddess." He had moved the Englishwoman at last.

"You promised me—" she began, and her voice and her face shook.

"That it should be burnt," Rukh assented. "I will keep my promise. For a white foe's body to lie at the foot of an Asian god, honors not dishonors it! I regret, if it pains you. But, you see, I had three brothers—a head for a head." He bowed slightly and passed slowly into the inner chamber. His priests clustered about him, and followed him.

But a guard remained. He took no step towards them—but he watched.

Lucilla sank down on the broad base of a pillar—her legs were trembling, and her heart felt queer and sick. Traherne could not speak to her yet.

"So this is the end!" she said in a hard, toneless voice.

"What offer did that devil make you?" he asked through stiffened lips.

"Oh," she replied after a moment, "I didn't mean to tell you, but I may as well. He is an ingenious tormentor. He offered yesterday to let me live, and to kidnap the children, and bring them here to me—you know on what terms."

"To bring the children here?" Dr. Traherne said oddly, his hands crunched together.

"He said," she went on, and her voice broke on her words a little, "in a month I might have them in my arms. Think of it! Ronny and Iris in my arms!"

Traherne turned away from her, as she crouched huddled and broken in her grief and hunger.

At last, still his back to her, Dr. Traherne said unsteadily: "Are you sure you did right to refuse?"

CHAPTER XXXII

IT was a terrible question. Could he answer it? Had he any right to bid her die, to let her die without strong protest from him, when she had even this chance of escape?

He could not decide! He did not see.

"Are you sure you did right to refuse?" he repeated, and sweat colder than death broke on his face.

"Do you mean—?" the woman asked.

"Are you sure it is not wrong to refuse?"

"Oh," the tortured, cowering woman cried, "how can you—? Right? Wrong? What are right and wrong to me now?" she sobbed. "If I could see my children again, would any scruple of 'right' or 'wrong' make me shrink from anything that was possible?" she asked passionately. "But this is so utterly, utterly impossible."

He turned and went to her then. "Forgive me. You know it would add an unspeakable horror to death, if I had to leave you here. But I felt I must ask you whether you had fully considered—"

"I have thought of nothing else through all these torturing hours."

"How brave you are!" he said in a choked voice. But his eyes were very proud.

"Not brave, not brave," she moaned. "If I could live, I would—there, I confess it! But I should die of shame and misery, and leave my children—to that man. Or, if I did live, what sort of a mother should I be to them? They would be much better without me!"

The moments passed. The slow sinking sun streaked its red warning through the clerestory slits.

"Lucilla!" He laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Oh, Basil," she looked up at him, "say you think it won't be altogether bad for them! They will never know anything of their father now but what was good. And their mother will simply have vanished into the skies. They will think she has flown away to heaven—and who knows but it may be true? There may be something beyond this hell."

"We shall soon know, Lucilla," he answered gently.

"But to go away and leave them without a word—!"

"They will remember you as something very dear and beautiful," he said, as he knelt down beside her, and gathered her hands into his. "The very mystery will be like a halo about you."

REV. GRIFFIN CALLED BY DEATH

represented his faith in this section of the city.

Then, a few years later, Father Griffin had built his parish to such an extent that he announced his dreams of a church, where members of his flock could worship.

They rallied to his support and within a short time the imposing St. Mark's Catholic church at the corner of Tenth street and Bissell avenue was constructed.

Since that time Father Griffin has been taking care of his church and parish until now the church debt has been completely wiped out.

Friend Of All

There were few people in Richmond who did not know Father Griffin. He was a friend of everyone, regardless of race, color or creed.

The body of the priest will lie in state at the parish hall Sunday until three o'clock in the afternoon.

Monday morning at 10:30 high mass will be said at the St. Mark's church. Interment will follow at Holy Cross cemetery at San Mateo.

Funeral services are under the direction of the Bert Curry funeral chapels.

Y. M. I., Y. L. I. TO ATTEND ROSARY

In respect to the memory of the late Father P. M. Griffin, members of the Y. M. I. and the Y. L. I. will attend a rosary to be said for him tomorrow night at the St. Mark's church, according to an announcement made at a meeting of the Y. M. I. in the Memorial hall last night.

Father Griffin was an honorary chaplain of the Y. M. I., and members of the organization will meet at the church at 8:30 tomorrow night to attend the services.

The annual quarterly communion of the Y. L. I. and the Y. M. I. will be held Sunday morning at the St. Mark's church, and in a body the two groups will pay final respects to the late pastor.

Thomas Dowd presided over the meeting last night, and it was announced that an initiation would be held April 3.
